SCHOOL REPORT

Whole number of scholars, 450.

Greatest number attending, 298.

Total length of each school, in weeks, 29

To the Citizens of Falmouth:

In making this annual report of our schools, I am able to say the past year has been one of satisfactory prosperity. Although there have been elements which have impaired, in a measure, the usefulness of some schools, yet considered as a whole, they have done good work.

At the opening of the year it became evident that repairs were needed on many of our school buildings, in some instances quite extensive, namely, at Nos. 1, 2 and 6, with slight repairs also at Nos. 4, 9 and 10, and painting the outside of Nos. 7 and 8.

The new house built this year for No. 12 school is a substantial building and is highly appreciated by the scholars and community. Much credit is due the pupils of this school for the disposition they have already shown of a proper regard for public property and a feeling of responsibility for its care and preservation. Through the efforts of teacher and pupils, No. 7 school has been provided with a bell.

In the matter of text books, as considered by your Committee, it was decided that inasmuch as many of the smaller grades of books, particularly the readers, had become badly worn and soiled by the seven years' use, to discard them and substitute Cyrs'. For similar reasons a change was made in the speller and primary arithmetic. We would urge upon the parents the necessity of greater home influence to be exercised by our children in the care of our books and school property in general. In fact, we believe that home influence—perhaps better, home training, together with the sentiment which exists in the community, have much to do with the success or failure of a school. No school is doing its best work until its importance is recognized and a certain amount of stimulus given in its support by the community. If this interest and sympathy are wanting the school will fall but little short of a failure.

In conclusion, we commend our schools to the wise and generous regard of our people, on whom rests the responsibility of their success. By means of them we hope to make better men and women and raise the standard of education.

Thanking the many who have shown a common interest in our labors the past year, I submit this report for your perusal.

F. B. BLANCHARD,
Supt. of Schools.
